QuaMMELOT

Module 3 "Communication and interpersonal relationships"

Phase 2 - Activity 1

Experiencing my change [Self-assessment]

Timing: 5 hours

Part devoted to Teaching Staff: theoretical-practical reflection

Starting from the following fragments:

"The entry of immigrant students in the educational centres of the Spanish State during these last decades, far from what is believed, contributes an added value and an opportunity to be able to interact with more diversity of opinions and visions of our environment" (Sampé-Compté, Arandia and Elboj, 2012:123).

"A true intercultural education values diversity and protects the cultural identity of minorities, placing them on an equal footing. If these conditions are respected, an appropriate framework is provided for the immigrant learner to re-construct his or her cultural identity, integrating new elements of the host culture into their previous cultural constructs" (Goenechea, 2014:1066).

"The diversity of origins in the classrooms generates a new social situation that requires a pedagogical response, which is found in intercultural education" (González-Rodríguez, 2014: 230).

"We face a challenge, to promote a mediating role of education between origin and social destiny and to constitute a tool for the recognition that all individuals in condition of citizens" (Martínez-Usarralde, Lloret-Catalá and Céspedes-Rico, 2016:50).

The exercise consists of capturing on paper, visually and concisely, how the progress you are experiencing is progressing while taking the course. The sketch must consist of three parts: how you were before you started, how you are during you are doing it and how you want to be after you finish. The aim is to visualise with a future perspective how your attitude as a person and as a teacher will change in the face of cultural diversity and reflect on how you work with cultural diversity within the classroom and the educational centre.

A drawing, a conceptual map, an outline, diagram, table or any illustration showing three phases: before, during and after. This product can be uploaded as a photograph or PDF document.